An elegant and high-performance solution to store and organize your contacts. It's a nice app to contact management, the user can import contacts from gmail, facebook, google, imported in csv or vcard format. My packages is taking much time to open. Can anyone help me on it? A: My solution I would use a database (e.g. SQLite, RDBMS) and python (and django, just a suggestion). Requirements: For importing contact data from any source you can always use Google API for Contacts. With databases you can easily create reliable functions that can do CRUD operations. Getting data Get all people from Google import urllib.request import re import json import logging logging.basicConfig(level=logging.INFO) LOGGER = logging.getLogger(__name__) # An API key obtained from Google console. GOOGLE_API_KEY = 'AIzaSyDIow9ITo3u0FijNee4H_3mYrHcUEsxyI' # This is the URL to use. Make sure to replace the API key. GOOGLE_CONTACTS_URL = '' + GOOGLE_API_KEY # The parameters are in the querystring. CONTACT_REQUEST = {'max-results': 1000} # Build a POST string and send it to the URL. def get_contacts_from_google(url, data, method='post'): body = urllib.request.urlencode(data) headers = {"Content-type": "application/x-www-form-urlencoded"} response = requests.request(method, url, headers=headers, data=body) return response.json() def main(): people = get_contacts_from_google(GOOGLE_CONTACTS_URL, CONTACT_REQUEST) if people is None: raise Exception("Unable to load people from google.")
